"On the Run" —WITH— MICHAEL COLLINS

(Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Republican Armies)

How He Fights! How He Wins! How He Is Never Caught!

By M. G. MAURY

For the first time the career of Michael Collins, Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Army in the Field, is told to American readers. This sketch of the great Irish patriot is written from facts given to the Boston American by officials of the Irish Republic. Collins as school and college, his boyhood ambition to free Erin and his first activity in the cause that led to his first physical clash with his traditional foemen is sketched in the first of three installments.

(SECOND INSTALMENT.)

Adventure tripped over the heels of adventure once Michael Collins had declared open warfare upon the foes of Ireland.

He was on his way one night to meet an appointment with officers of the Irish Volunteers in Mardyke Walk, Cork, when he was again assailed by agents of the British Government. That time discretion proved the better part of valor. Collins ran.

Not so far away was a house in which some repairs were being made and the workingmen had left a ladder leaning against the wall. Up this ladder went Collins and after him came the manhunters.

COLLAPSE OF RAILROADS UNDER PRIVATE CONTROL PREDICTED

CUMMINS SEES DANGER IN ANOTHER BAD YEAR

Washington, May 17.—The financial condition of the railroads cannot be untangled "for a long time," Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The carriers will not know how financially until the exact amount the government guarantees during six months of Federal operation is ascertained, Mr. Willard said. The task of auditing the government's accounts with the carriers was proving a very difficult one.

Another year like 1920 will cause collapse of the entire railroad system, Senator Cummins, chairman of the committee, told Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, who appeared before the committee in the Senate Office Building today.

Mr. Willard stood firmly on the railroad position, done by the railroads last year, to prove by their own statistics contention that private operation has been successful.

Freight rates would extend traffic and increase earnings, Mr. Willard declared. Operation and ownership of the railroads a witness Mr. Willard declared. In order to make traffic to level which railroads can handle it is necessary before the war and it did not now.

RICH WOMAN IS POLICE HEAD

Mrs. George W. Loft, Placed in Charge of Division, at $1 a Year

New York, May 17.—From girl clerk at a candy counter to deputy police commissioner of the greatest city in the world is the remarkable achievement of Mrs. George W. Loft, whose appointment to that high office is announced by Commissioner Enright.

Mrs. Loft, the wife of a wealthy candy manufacturer, will be New York's first "dollar-a-year woman."

She succeeds to a position which paid her predecessor $6,000 a year, but she will accept no salary for her services. For that reason her title is "honorary deputy commissioner."

Mrs. Loft will be placed in charge of the special duty division and the women's precinct on West Thirty-Seventh street. Mrs. Loft said today that there would be nothing "honorary" about her participation in the work, as she expects to begin regular office hours and active supervision of the department at once.

Mrs. Loft's interest in the police department dates back to the time when her brother, John McMahon, was a patrolman. She will have charge of sixty police sergeants and lieutenants, and of twenty-eight police women.

Mrs. Loft is a comparatively young woman, and quite pretty. She is popular and very well known for the active part she has taken in welfare work and other civic affairs.

Reduction in U. S. Burden Possible as English Pay Interest

By International News Service.

Washington, May 17.—A material reduction in the tax burden of America is possible as a result of the British government's decision to defer meeting interest payments on the British debt of $4,000,000,000, Treasury officials said today.

Secretary Mellon has been informed by the British premier that the postponement of about $300,000,000 annual interest upon the debt, it is understood that the inclusion of such an item in the British budget for the fiscal year forecasts England's inability to meet forthcoming disbursements to United States representatives. That may be regarded as an admission that the debt negotiations are to be left to the Treasury, as soon as the British arrange to send an official delegation.

Secretary Mellon maintains that no action can be taken by the United States on the question of interest payments on the debt owing to this country by England, which the two nations are to be converted—America getting its money—until the British offers are made.

May Bar Use of Air to Fighting Foes

Washington, May 17.—Here's a question Mr. Edison should add to his list:

Is it permissible for for belligerents to use the air over a neutral nation through which to transmit their radio messages?

It's a question the accumulation section of the international communications congress will soon thresh out. Another one is whether the aircraft of a belligerent nation has a right to the atmosphere of a neutral. Both grow out of the recent world war, and the conference is understood to want them settled in case there's another.

Some countries already prohibit the use of foreign aircraft. Mexico has taken the most advanced stand. It was pointed out here today. The Carranza constitution is held to retain all the space from the land and water surface up, and in the other direction to the centre of the earth.

CRANE'S ESTATE $9,228,983

$2,000,000 Inheritance Tax Yielded From Property of Late Ex-Senator

Pittsfield, May 17.—The late Senator Winthrop Murray Crane of Dalton left an estate of $9,228,983, according to the inventory and appraisal filed in the Berkshire Probate Court office this morning. The inheritance tax on the estate will amount to $2,000,000, according to the estimate of Frederick W. Rockwell, deputy commissioner of corporations and taxation of Massachusetts. Mayor Lewis Stevens of Pittsfield is executor of the estate.

The value of the estate as appraised by Mr. Rockwell is $9,228,983.14. The tax on that amount will be $2,000,000.

GIRL SCOUTS GIVE BABY HYGIENE EXHIBITION

A home nursing demonstration by the Girl Scouts of Winchester was the feature of the entertainment at the exhibits of the Children's Industrial School in the Elizabeth Peabody House. Under the direction of Mrs. Reed, assistant director for the Red Cross, the young girls exhibited the latest approved methods of caring for a baby.

The recreation groups displayed their ability to give first aid to the injured. They showed how, with a scarf or handkerchief, a broken arm may be bandaged, and how to carry a person who is unconscious. Other exhibits showed the work done by the children of the different grades.

The program was completed by an address on the value of the school by the president, Mrs. Henry Pierce.

Children's clothes made by the pupils of the school were on display.

BOSTON COLLEGE GETS 2 MILLION

Final Drive of Parishes and Flood of Big Donations Brings Success

Thanks American for Aiding B. C. Drive

To the Editor:
The Boston American,
No. 80 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

Dear Sirs: In behalf of Reverend William Devlin, S. J., president of Boston College, the committee associated with the Boston College Building Fund Campaign, and the student body of the College, as well as personally, I wish to extend to you our sincere thanks and deep appreciation for the splendid support which the Boston American has given to our campaign from its inception. This support was of inestimable value in the success of our campaign.

Yours very truly,
JAMES J. PHELAN,
Chairman.

Formal announcement of the success of the Boston College Building Fund campaign was made last night at a parish supper, attended by 2000 persons, held at the Boston College gymnasium, Harrison avenue and Berkeley street. The results will be officially announced at Sunday morning masses in the parishes.

FLOOD OF BIG DONATIONS.

Success of drive was further guaranteed by the flood of unusually large contributions at the last minute. The Cotting estate added with a pledge of $25,000 made through former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston.

Included in the contributions above $1,000 were:

John B. De Valles Council, K. of C., $5,000; Humphrey O'Sullivan, K. of C., $5,000; Marlboro Council, K. of C., $5,000; Andover Council, K. of C., $2,500; Andover Councils, K. of C., $2,000; District Attorney Joseph Pelletier, $2,000 and Colonel Peter H. Corr, $2,000.

HEARST SUBSCRIBES $1,000.

Contributors of $1,000 included William Randolph Hearst, Major William O'Shea of Dunedin, Fla.; James A. Dunn of Brookline, J. W. Sullivan & Company, and Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kennedy of Mendon.

The matinee performance of "The O'Brien Girl," given tonight for the benefit of the Mt. Vernon Parish, promised to realize between $2,500 and $3,000 for the fund, as the boxes and the crowded lower bands at the theatre showed much enthusiasm for the performance and their services and a contribution of $25.

FR. DEVLIN THANKS WORKERS.

In an address of thanks to workers in the campaign to-day Rev. William J. Devlin, president of Boston College, said:

"We wish to render you from our name and in the name of the faculty, members of Boston College heartfelt thanks for your wonderful co-operation, the marvelous spirit of unselfishness, the untiring workers and unquenchable devotion evinced by them. The whole world will know the calibre of Boston when they think of their institutions."

Less Underwear Is Worn This Year

Washington, May 17.—They are not going to wear much this summer. Take the word of the Federal Reserve Board.

It's simply a cold statistical fact. Underwear is not being worn as in other years says the board. Reserve banks reported that the knit goods manufacturers are producing summer underwear about 10 per cent. below normal.

Shares of Swift & Company are widely distributed. The map shows the number of shareholders in each state and has been dotted to indicate the proportionate distribution.

Who is Swift & Company?

Swift & Company is not a one man or one family affair. It is a company owned by more than 40,000 people scattered over the face of the globe—forty thousand shareholders with voting powers and a share in the risks and profits of the business.

Most of the forty thousand live here in the United States. But some of them live in France, some in England, others in the Philippines, Hawaii, Alaska.

13,000 of them are women.

Nearly 14,000 of them are employes.

The average individual holdings are small—about 37 shares apiece.

No one person or family owns a majority of the stock.

In fact, it would take 900 of the largest shareholders pooled together to vote 51 percent of the stock!

These shareholders are the men and women whose money, in the form of capital, makes Swift & Company possible.

They are jealous of the character and reputation of their organization, proud of what it is doing, proud to have a part in supplying to the world such products as Swift's Premium Ham and Bacon, Brookfield Sausage, Silverleaf Brand Pure Lard, Wool Soap, Swift & Company's fresh meats, etc.

The executives of Swift & Company maintain the high standards of these products as an imperative duty not only to the 40,000 shareholders, but to the public.

SECRET SERVICE MEN OUTWITTED

Collins, Head of Sinn Fein Army, Tells of Thrilling Escapes

On the roof Collins turned and with a tremendous heave pitched ladders and men over backwards into the street. Then he dropped through the torn place in the roof to the attic of the house and quietly walked out through the front door unnoticed.

[illegible] OF LEWIS SECRET SERVICE.

[illegible] DISGUISED AS COLONEL.

[illegible] AWAY

Another time Collins, dressed as a British colonel and commanding a body of Irish soldiers in British uniforms, went to a Dublin freight yard, demanded and received from the G. S. C. office in charge a consignment of ammunition and bombs shipped to the garrison at Fort Helle barracks. He signed a receipt for the delivery of the consignment, ordered it loaded aboard waiting truck and departed unmolested.

[illegible] PROTECTED BY SLEUTH

[illegible] LIES PROCLAIMED A REPUBLIC.

The Irish had taken the general postoffice in the centre of the business section, and throngs of civilians, attracted by the battle from school and office, were gathered from all over town to find out what was going for[illegible]

Similar excitement marked the occupation of the Four Courts, county Dublin Union, Jacobs factory, College of Surgeons, Mansion House, Trinity and other strategic positions by the Irish forces, all of which marked completion of the initial phase of the rising of Dublin.

Behind the parapets and the quickly barricaded windows of the postoffice the soldiers of the Irish Republican army had taken up their positions. Suddenly there was a strange hush, and from the steps of the postoffice walked Padraic Pearse, recently elected president of the provisional government.

He had been among the first to enter the building, and as soon as his followers had been safely stationed at their posts, he strode into O'Connell, formerly Sackville street, planted with a half company of his soldiers, to make the most momentous announcement Irish ears had listened to in many a generation.

Eye-witnesses of that scene say that he was wearing a formal uniform, that he carried a handsome rapier sword and bore himself proudly. He read aloud the proclamation of the Irish republic, and when the cheers of the assembled multitude died away Pearse turned and slowly walked back to his position inside the postoffice.

RAPS MAYOR'S DENIAL OF VETERAN PRIVILEGE

Mayor Peters was criticised for not signing a letter disabling veterans of the World War the refreshment privilege in Franklin Park or Old Colony. John Donoghue Donoghue declared this privilege had been granted by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union without compensation to the city when disabled veterans might have been able to realize by it. He also attached importance of an order requesting the Mayor to submit a $1,000 appropriation for the decoration of the graves of Boston soldiers buried in France, the sum to be given to the American Legion for that purpose.

New York, May 17.—Baby Guy Stillman, the tragic figure in the marital difficulties of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman, is exercising to the utmost, it was learned today, his recently acquired vocabulary.

But it is a sad fact, a friend of the Stillmans declared today, that there is one word the boy never uses, and that word is "father."

"WHY WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY?"

Because:

EVERY LOT ADVERTISED is priced at practically no profit for "WEDNESDAY-THURSDAY" only.

EVERY LOT ADVERTISED is dependable quality and must measure up to our standards.

EVERY LOT ADVERTISED for these Wednesday sales must be timely and desirable.

EVERY LOT ADVERTISED must be the biggest value of its kind to be found in New England on these days.

Our Reasons: The increased volume of business helps in turning our stocks. It encourages mid-week shopping—thus tending to equalize the daily sales. This, in turn, helps to stabilize our selling force, and, most important of all, it attracts new customers to the store.

FOUR SOUGHT IN BRONX SHOOTING

Brains of Blackmailers' Gang Suspected as Man Who Wounded Reid

New York, May 17—The police today were still searching for four persons identified in the sensational shooting Sunday morning of James H. Reid, fingerprint salesman, in the home of Mrs. Hazel Warner in the Bronx.

Mrs. Warner, who disappeared from her home at the time of the shooting, was found yesterday in a hotel in Atlantic City, N. J., by detectives who had been sent there by Chief Inspector John Hughes. She was brought back to New York and held as a material witness.

Mrs. Warner's husband, Harry Warner, is in the Tombs prison awaiting trial on a charge of first degree manslaughter in connection with the death of Reid. Warner is charged with shooting Reid in the home of Mrs. Warner's mother-in-law, Mrs. Frank Bertha, on March 20. Mrs. Warner was arrested with her husband and Mrs. Bertha.

Mrs. Warner's testimony before the grand jury that Reid was in the home of her mother-in-law as the guest of Eugene Lapointe, a Frenchman, who was shot and killed by Warner, is described as the principal evidence against the latter.

Mrs. Warner's testimony, it was said, was corroborated in many details by Frank Bertha and Mrs. Lena Warner, wife of Harry Warner, who were also arrested in the Warner-Bertha flat.

Mrs. Warner's testimony that Reid was a member of a gang of blackmailers who used the Manet Art Co. as a cloak for their operations, and that Reid was about to betray the gang to Federal authorities, when Warner shot him, is said to be borne out by a large scale of the gang's operations, which was found in the Bertha flat.

Leaders of Business Have 'Edison Minds'

By B. C. FORBES

With what should a man address to attain success, fill his memory?

Should he try to become a walking encyclopedia?

Or should he concentrate his mind upon knowledge and facts bearing directly upon his work?

James J. Hill was once asked these questions. He replied that he preferred to have a mind like Edison's. Mr. Hill's answer was characteristic. He was not a man to do anything without good reason.

Mr. Hill attributed many of his successes to drawing out from those experienced in the matters he was considering. He was a master of the art of getting every ounce of information which could throw light on the subject in hand. He was a wonderful listener. He would sit for hours at a time, absorbing what others had to say.

Mr. Hill was interested in many other things. They tell this story of the impression a visit to Edison's laboratory made upon him. Mr. Hill, on leaving, said to Edison: "I have been thinking all the way from the station of a number of the matters I want to consult you about, but I cannot remember a single one of them just now. I will have to write them down and send them to you later." Mr. Hill's memory was so remarkable that he rarely found it necessary to make memoranda.

Mr. Hill would wind up the mind of a would-be adviser by saying: "Now, let us talk about some of the things I am interested in." He would then direct Mr. Hill's attention to the matters which he wished to discuss, and then would ask questions. "I discovered early in my career," he would say, "that most men were only too glad to get relief by unloading their minds on to me."

The president of the Great Northern, James J. Hill, was a man of tremendous mental energy. He could absorb more information than any man I know. He could clearly digest, analyze and assimilate it. He had the ability to answer without reflection questions involving thousands of figures. He was a marvel at remembering facts and figures. He could carry in his head the details of every railroad, steamship line and every commercial enterprise in the United States owned or controlled by the Great Northern system.

Not only was he a master of every line and every commercial activity carried on by railroads, but he was equally well informed in Mr. Farrell's mind as Mark Hanna was in the coal trade. He carried in his head the details of every single horse. By not memorizing such minutiae he kept his memory ready to grasp and retain the important points in connection with every subject.

Thomas A. Edison, whose famous quotation is "genius is 1 per cent inspiration and 99 per cent perspiration," is extraordinarily well informed on many subjects. When I was in his laboratory he devoted the waiting time of the visitors to reading up on the latest publications. He recently told me that he had read every book, magazine and newspaper article he could find on the subject of electricity. He was going through his plant one day and found a young inventor working on a problem which Edison knew nothing about. Edison immediately plunged into the subject, and in a few minutes had mastered the book from which the young man was reading. Edison's memory is prodigious. He is constantly storing away information concerning everything that the young people aspire to accomplish.

My own observation, after rubbing elbows with a great many successful men, is that most of them have one characteristic in common. They are interested in many things. They are not one-sided men. They are not "cranks" on any subject. They are not "hobby riders." They are not "faddists." They are not "bores" on any particular topic.

I might add that they are extremely interested in the affairs of their fellow men. They are not "highbrows" who look down upon the affairs of the common people. They are not "lowbrows" who look down upon the affairs of the intellectuals. They are not "highbrows" who look down upon the affairs of the intellectuals. They are not "highbrows" who look down upon the affairs of the intellectuals. They are not "high

CHAMPION IS OPPOSED TO GENTLE TRAINING

By JACK DEMPSEY.
Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 17.—The biggest job that confronts me right now in training for ring sparring partners.

I plan to use more sparring partners for this fight than ever before. I'll need a variety of them. Fellows who are fast and clever, fellows who can hit and fellows who can take it. Too many times will he to get the reputation that can take the punishing that I need to stand out when in training.

I've got to have that. I need it to keep me in shape. I've got to have it to keep my timing right. I've got to have it to keep my eye right. I've got to have it to keep my punches right. I've got to have it to keep my confidence right. I've got to have it to keep my speed right. I've got to have it to keep my condition right.

Whenever I have been in the ring with a fighter who could not take punishing while in training I have found that I could not get the work I needed. I have found that I could not get the speed I needed. I have found that I could not get the timing I needed. I have found that I could not get the confidence I needed.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

BUT Diana was thing would be the wife. Then, on a good day with Tom, from the nation of his instinct. How could he have thought he was in love with her? How could he now imagine that she was in love with him? Diana, a successful man's wife, Diana, a successful man's mistress, Diana, a successful man's plaything—these were the highest ideals which he could conceive for the woman he loved. Diana was not for him. She was not for any man who could not give her the world.

Health Returned

Health returned to Manners' cheeks. His eyes grew bright and clear. He was ashamed of his self-pity. He was ashamed of his weakness. He was ashamed of his cowardice. He was ashamed of his dishonesty. He was ashamed of his treachery. He was ashamed of his disloyalty. He was ashamed of his faithlessness. He was ashamed of his unmanliness. He was ashamed of his selfishness. He was ashamed of his meanness. He was ashamed of his littleness. He was ashamed of his contemptibleness. He was ashamed of his despicableness. He was ashamed of his abjectness. He was ashamed of his worthlessness. He was ashamed of his nothingness. He was ashamed of himself.

He was ashamed of himself. He was ashamed of himself. He was ashamed of himself.

He pictured the poor fellow's face, recovering its Diana's expression, then mournful, grieved and resigned, as he bade her farewell. Mr. Quigley Pinto, for the last time. What thought Manners, gave her three months of Burlingame with Pinto? One thing doing all round the room, and she'll have forgotten what he looked like.

Unfortunately for these comforting reasons Diana who met him in the Grand Central Station, the wild telegrams of the past two days was not an insignificant act whose peregrinations were of no importance. Instead of that she was the wife, beautiful, fervent, self-willed and still determined to wreck his home and to hurt their little daughters' chances.

She was in good fighting trim. She had never looked younger, or more wistfully beautiful, or more exquisitely feminine. Her close-cropped tousled mane, twenty times thicker than its meager contents, or her nerves for all effect, was like silken threads, trailed themselves, and Manners soon was to learn that she had built up their resources by a deliberate physical force upon a desperate plan.

She had clung all along to essentials, to the sound of her husband's voice which had been torn from him in a moment of pitying and almost tender emotion, to the blind statement that he would think of nothing but her happiness, to her belief that then the love husband always kept for a sword.

All Planned Out

Now, in justice to Manners it must be remembered that he had not promised her a divorce. He had merely accepted the idea at once. And he had accepted that idea without thinking them. Further more, to work solely for Diana's happiness was not necessarily to let her have her own way. But she took it for granted (or appeared to) that there was to be a divorce, and that she was to have her own way about everything.

They drove at once to the Plaza, Alhambra Station, and she went without waiting any time, that is, and ordered a taxi and that take them at once to the Grand Central Station. Manners offered the best and most conspicuous gathering of their marriage past.

A residence would be established in a year, she had written to Pinto Harrow, but perhaps that would be a long time to wait. But she would be very brave about that. And besides, she would be able to see Penn now and then. Let's have funny things.

If you were going to marry a man—were, in fact, going to get divorce for no other reason than to marry him—it seemed ridiculous not to see him every day. She wanted to.

The laws were silly and old-maidish, but she supposed—

He shook his head. The most disarming naivete, exasperatingly the real reason why I want a divorce doesn't count at all.

Manners listened to her in amazement. His intention to quit her calmly and loyally, that there was to be no divorce, had been her resolute. It would lead instantaneously into a most complicated and acute. He would be accused of saying things that weren't true, and of making promises that he had not intended to keep. He be compromised and procrastinated.

"Let's not think of it all just now," he said. "I'll take four days and nights in the train, and I'm not up on the Maine laws, though I did have a fleeting question. Took more than a year."

"Duration, much," she said with joy. "Over on the other coast, I mean. So of course that's out of the question."

"You told me once that you wouldn't think of divorcing me on any other grounds."

ORGANDIES and crepe georgettes are exceedingly popular for these early warm days when the slightest of material are most appropriate. A fetching little affair is a charming and diaphanous model made of these fabrics that appeal strongly to all womenkind. The dress at the left, built of lavender organdie, suggests the Spanish tendency in her summer costumes by the way, that women can pleasingly adopt by adapting pencil and other picturesque effects for her modern life. The straight bodice and flaring skirt of the organdie model, practical, has bands of vivid green organdie bound in gold and edged with scallops, the neck and short sleeves, and also form the pockets on the front and back of the bodice. A sash, which is a continuation of the bodice trimming, hangs loosely on the back under ribbon, and ends in a fringe. To complete the picture costume the long hundred dollar parasol is used.

One notices that, of course, the sixteenth century sleeves, quite modernized, have distinctly the renascent effect. Narrow silver tissue ribbon, threaded with rose cord, finishes the bodice and the shoulder girdle. The long, detached panel which swings decoratively from the back is gathered in rose. The skirt, it will be noticed, is made of many panels of georgette.

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

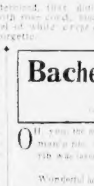
ONE can be modern and still aware that one was fashioned from a man's rib, but one is beginning to be secretly convinced that rib is the least rib from his shoulder side, and left an awful hollow.



Wonderful how a little vacation from each other brightens up a humdrum conversation and smartens up a office clothes. It takes the light of a new interest, and and then to keep up the glow of life.

The average man has such a large collection of little weaknesses that no matter how poor the aim of his wife's sarcasm, she can always hit him in one of them.

Flattering a man makes him think a little better of himself—and a lot better of you!

Divorce age has its inquisitions! The day of the "Court of all has passed," but the horror has been replaced by the formal tea. The Terrible Tea—where you stand around spilling or freshly decorated plates, talk to a lot of women you don't know, break all your rules of diet, ruin your appetite for dinner and wreck your figure with sweets. Tea! The invention of Mrs. Satan, and the doctor's best friend.

Before marriage a man and woman can go on seeing each other, eyeing after eyeing, forever, without brushing the bloom off their romance; but after marriage (remember that they don't have to see each other morning after morning).

A woman says "no" when she means "yes," probably because she is aware that her "yes" will be decidedly more effective and permanent if she can put it off for a little while.

It is hard to tell which suffers more poignantly, the woman who watches a man handling her baby or the man who listens to a woman telling his favorite story.

A sense of humor is the balancing rod which keeps us on life's trolley.

The Rhyming Optimist

THE bastedon has gone away, the dodo, too, has vanished, the dinosaur has had his day, the ghost sea ape is banished. These creatures once cavorted 'round in everybody's garden; but how they moulder underground while pooles around them harden. As relics of a by-gone age we dig them out to amuse them, but though they once were all the rage, today who'd care to know them? Some other things are made the same; our grandmas used to prize them, but many changes in life's games have taught us to despise them. For instance, take the honored patch which now is gone completely, a girl was once a splendid catch if she but patched things neatly. You, in those days of "sixty-three the patch in the anodyne, on father's coat, on Johnny's knee, shone everywhere resplendent. The dodo, lost through ages past, is buried no more surely than are the patches of the past, which once were worn demurely. The patch can only be today a butt for every joker, for it is hopeless. In place you grandma's placing poker. Yet as I strain my slender purse while buying clothes in batches, I often think they may be worn than good, old-fashioned patches.

Let Us Aid Salvation Army's Splendid Work

The splendid enthusiasm with which Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army was received by the people of Boston at the Tremont Temple indicates the general feeling of the public towards the Salvation Army.

Popular appreciation of this body has grown steadily in the last twenty years, and was crowned by its achievements during the war. We have frequently called attention to the fact that of all the semi-official organizations for the amelioration of the hardships of our soldiers in France, the organization which appealed most to the soldiers, which won their greatest affection, was undoubtedly the Salvation Army. There was a direct appeal, a personal intimacy, an absence of red tape and of that impersonal atmosphere, which led John Boyle O Reilly to write of such charitable bodies the lines "organized charity scrimped and iced in the name of a cautious, statistical Christ." The good-will, the sympathy and humanity of the contributors of the Salvation Army fund was not insulated from the beneficiaries of the fund by the cold, impersonal, strictly business-like spirit of the agents. In the Salvation Army at the front, the agents partook of the spirit of the donors, and added to the donor's gift something out of their own spirit.

There is no more worthy way to bestow aid on the needy than through the Salvation Army. It is not an ostentatious charity, and in the way of ostentation, it will not be like Portia's quality of mercy, twice blessed, blessing him that gives and him that takes; but if the gift is not, or show but for real philanthropy it will give to the donor at least as much satisfaction as a gift to any other organization.

We hope that our Massachusetts people will distinguish themselves by accepting the verdict of our young men who were unhappily in a position where they knew the quality of philanthropic service during the war.

During this past year, Mrs. Booth says that the Salvation Army has cared for 10,000 outcast girls and 73,000 children. Last year, she tells us that the speakers of the Salvation Army addressed over 33,000,000 people. Let us help that good work.

Effect of Ford's Reported Discovery on Railways

Henry Ford has announced that he has discovered a by-product of coal which he can extract from a thousand tons in sufficient quantities to haul a thousand tons a thousand miles and yet leave untouched all of the other valuable by-products of the coal.

If this is true it will be revolutionary in the railroad world. Consider what this would mean if this great economy were developed under government operation of the railroads when all the benefits of it would accrue to the people and see what it would mean if it were developed under private operation when all the benefits of it would accrue to a few private individuals.

Cast your mind back over the years in which railroads have existed and think of the improvements which the arts and sciences have made in transportation. Let your mind's eye see the little donkey engines and coaches looking like an ordinary closed carriage that a pair of horses used to draw, capable of carrying five or six people, with the engine itself not half so heavy as an automobile. Then look at the tremendous giant that we call locomotive today, hauling its mile of gigantic cars as fast as that little donkey engine hauled those two or three little carriages on rails. Think of the great engines that rush our express trains sixty, seventy, eighty and ninety miles an hour with a dozen coaches, not one of which weighs less than fifty of the little carriages, on rails that comprised our first trains.

If any of the intelligent men of 1840 had been told that the day would come when these little miniature things they called a train in those days would expand into the gigantic argosy we call a train today and would be hauled by one engine, and yet that the cost of carrying freight and passengers would be greater today than it was then, do you think he would have believed it? Certainly not, if he were sane.

The public has not received the benefit of their improvements, except in the time of transportation of passengers, but not of freight. All the economies of these great improvements in the transportation system have gone into the pockets of the few who controlled the railroads and managed them for private profit. Therefore, no matter what price we would be likely to have to pay for the railroads it would be cheap if the only benefit we could get from them would be our ability to appropriate to ourselves the entire benefit from all the improvements which the inventive genius of man will make on the railroads in the future.

Secretary Davis Welcome

The Secretary of Labor Davis is very welcome in Boston, because Boston has received a good impression of him, even during the very short period of his official life.

In Boston, we like the common sense and honesty with which he denounced this disgusting campaign by private detectives seeking employment, police seeking heroics, newspapers seeking sensation, and the anti-labor propagandist seeking to frighten the timid and unorganized elements of society, the school teacher, the small lawyer and physician, the little business man and the unsophisticated farmer, into believing that there is a dangerous revolutionary body of Reds in this country.

The success that Secretary Davis has already obtained in settling strikes in difficult labor situations, apparently to the satisfaction of both the employers and the men, makes us believe that he is a real Secretary of Labor, and makes us welcome him doubly.

Should Accept Airplanes

The Federal government offers to provide a squadron of thirteen airplanes to the State of Massachusetts for the training of State Guardsmen in connection with coast artillery defences. The government will supply the planes and the training, the State is only asked to supply the hangars and the expenses of its own men. The initial cost will be about $4,000.

One would expect that the State would be eager to accept this offer, but it appears that there is some danger that misunderstanding among our State officials may allow the offer to pass unaccepted. This would be too bad. If we are to have a State military organization, we certainly ought not to pass up the government's offer with respect to training in the use of military airplanes.

Waiting

AT THE CROSS ROADS OF LIFE

Nellie Bly presents conclusion of letter from woman who faces loss of all her hopes and dreams because of unexpected reverses.

By Nellie Bly

"We insisted on getting one of the best machines and some of the best records. We would have to get some of their kind of music, too. But we believe if now and then we slipped in one of Gardner's or Schumann-Heink's records that gradually they would learn to love and call for that and, then the rest would be easy.

"I will tell you a little incident to show you how they feel about reading for themselves. I was coming out of the postoffice and had torn open the daily paper to look at the headlines. I can never wait till I get home. A neighbor came up to me and said: 'I see you take a daily. Our subscription ran out, but I am going to make Tom renew it.' I replied: 'Yes, doesn't one miss it?' I always feel as if a friend we expected had failed to come if we do not get our daily. And I never can wait to open it till we get home.'

In a Superior Way

She looked at me in such a superior way and said: 'Oh, I never read the things, but the sheets are just the right size for my pantry shelves.'

'Do you find never read their letters are just a bother sometimes?'

'Many of them are well-to-do people and are sending fine large letters. It's the furnishings.'

'One neighbor invited me over one day. She wanted to show me her new home and furnished living room. She said it had always been the dream of her life to have a 'real nice parlor,' and she wanted me to see what I thought of it.

'And, oh, Miss Bly, this is what I saw:

'A large room, 18x24, with south and east windows. The walls were papered with white paper, having large red roses trailing all over it. The woodwork was painted in a supposed representation of oak. As to the floor were two large, but very cheap oriental rugs with small rugs of various kinds criss-crossing it at all angles. Cheap lace curtains were draped at the windows, indeed, cheap although she told me they were very expensive.

'Amidst the room was a most wonderful collection of odds and ends. A new light oak cheap piano stood in one corner with a brown plush cover. An exact one of those high-backed heavily carved kinds a mother and family brackets on it and with a red plush stool before it, stood in another corner. A bamboo umbrella stand in another corner with no shelves filled with China vases, gilt books, shelf boxes, vases and everything like that all open to the last.

'I forget what was in the other corner, but believe linen pieces the wall spaces were actually solid with stands, chairs, rockers and pedestals. The pictures were of almost every size and shape and color.

'So when my neighbor said proudly: 'What do you think of my parlor?' I replied: 'Well now this is a parlor.'

'You see you cannot deal with these people like you can with those in mines. Here they would accept any inference that their ways are not the best, although they do not know anything about the advantages of bathrooms and the like, lighting plants, etc. And they could just as well have them, for they are able to afford them if only one led the way. One does not dare use any strong reform measures or preach to them.

'We thought we would just reform our own home, which is not just a little two-room cabin shanty, big dreams for a place that, you aren't there.' But we have been putting everything into paying the bills and paying off our debt. Next winter we planning to get long-wished-for new home and also a location.

'Life seems so short now that one hasn't time to die. But we have a good chance to save, as we and all of our personal needs. We have everything raised on the farm and wear down to mine for before ever. We pinched pretty hard.

'We did not get enough to pay our taxes and what labor we had to hire at $3 a day and feed on that. We have not had any investment on our land to meet that amounting to $300. If we do not have it the tax sale will be held and the land will be bought in and closed. Money is so tight here and the banks have cut all lines and would not loan us money even to get out this for the railroads enough to meet the mortgage, and no wrong them, but the soft weather this Winter spoiled the roads, so that any hauling has been and is impossible for some time now, and that chance is also gone for us.

'I don't know what we can do. My husband, the best and kindest man that ever lived, is about discouraged.

Something to Sell

'Now I am at the cross-roads. I must have money, and the only I have to sell. I have a paper printed in Washington's time. It is mourning for Washington and tells all about his funeral as well as having general news and advertisements. My great-great-grandfather took the paper and it was handed down from generation to generation until given to my aunt, and she gave it to me. It is a very rare and yellow but well preserved.

'Then ever since I can remember I have written songs. I hear a phrase or see a picture and a song just naturally builds itself. I do not know if they have any value, and that is one thing I ask you to tell me.

'I want to add I am especially blue today. We have lost our best cow. We found her dead in the pasture last night.

'So I see no way of helping myself unless you can find a market for my old Washington paper or some publisher for my stories and my songs.

The Way of the World

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

THIS is the way of it, wide world over,
One is beloved, and one is the lover,
One gives and the other receives.
One lavishes all in a wild emotion,
One offers a smile for a life's devotion,
One hopes and the other believes.
One lies awake in the night to weep,
And the other drifts off in a sweet sound sleep.

One soul is aflame with a godlike passion,
One plays with love in an idler's fashion,
One speaks and the other hears.
One sobs "I love you," and wet eyes show it.
And one laughs lightly and says "I know it."
With smiles for the other's fears.
One lives for the other and nothing beside,
And the other remembers the world is wide.

This is the way of it, sad world over,
The heart that breaks is the heart of the lover,
And the other learns to forget.
"For what is the use of endless sorrow?
Though the sun goes down, it will rise tomorrow;
And life is not over yet."
Oh! I know this truth, if I know no other,
That passionate Love is Pain's own mother.

VEGA RIDES QUEEN OF SUMMER NIGHT

By Garrett P. Serviss.

[illegible] I am going to answer a question about [illegible] Vega [illegible] would be still [illegible] I could convey an impression of the thrill of interest with which your after [illegible] I see the splendid gem flashing above the northwestern horizon, as it returns once more to rule the late evening queen of the September night.

Vega, also known as Alpha Lyrae is one of the brightest of the stars, being of magnitude 0.1, or [illegible] brilliant [illegible] to instantly attracts attention and imparts a special [illegible] to its rays.

Color Intensified

[illegible] color is intensified when [illegible] star is viewed with a telescope, or [illegible] spectroscope is given to a great [illegible] sun reduced by [illegible] of distance to a great [illegible] star.

During the early part of May one should look for it about 9 o'clock in the evening (war time), rather [illegible] northeast [illegible] the [illegible] of the sky. Besides its extraordinary brilliancy, white color, it possesses an identification mark not to be mistaken. This is formed by four neighboring stars of the fourth magnitude, grouped close to Vega in the sky, and so spaced that [illegible] of [illegible] Vega lies [illegible] the [illegible] of a little equilateral [illegible] with sides about two degrees long.

Two Pairs of Stars

The northern of the little pairs is Epsilon Lyrae, [illegible] as [illegible] Vega. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] telescope shows it to consist of two close pairs of stars that seem to be revolving around their common centre.

Vega is also interesting from the fact that it is one of the few [illegible] the motion of the solar system [illegible] [illegible] of a speed of [illegible] miles per hour. Its distance from us [illegible] Vega does not [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
